Hidden Anger Part One Church

It reaches out to injure anyone who makes a suitable target. What is especially alarming is that such anger can be hidden even to the person retaining it yet manifest itself in ways that are subtle, indirect, and illusive. In Part Two, we will look at scriptural examples of anger that remains beneath the surface but is nevertheless very real.

Hidden Anger (Part One)

Just look at people's faces as they move about in their daily activities at home, at school, on television, or in the movies. Sadly, God's church is not immune to anger. It is a common characteristic of human nature. Sometimes anger is hidden and smoldering. They often do not express it openly. On the surface, things look calm.

Anger (Part 1) - True Gospel

The anger, malice, and violence are hidden and smooth (see Proverbs 10:18). The anger can only be observed by its effect on others, rather than in full-bore, red-faced fury resulting in bloodshed. The injuries from this man are not physical; his aggression may be quite passive.

Moses was a remarkably self-controlled leader. When the Hebrews tested his patience one too many times, though, he lost his cool. Today's pastors aren't immune to anger, either—and unfortunately, a quick-tempered pastor will often cause great harm to his church, his home, and ultimately himself. In response to this sobering reality, Christopher Ash leads pastors through a series of ...

Anger and the Pastor - Archive - Truth For Life

Yes, it is. It is a sin against God who loves us, and a sin against ourselves, for anger is spiritual suicide. Anger held within us, not dealt with, is like a cancer eating away at us, killing our God-given souls. And the stupid part about harboring such hidden anger is that it does no harm to the person who hurt us.
