The Atrocity Exhibition is an experimental novel of linked stories or "condensed novels" by British writer J. G. Ballard . The book was originally published in the UK in 1970 by Jonathan Cape. After a 1970 edition by Doubleday & Company had already been printed, Nelson Doubleday, Jr. personally cancelled the publication and had the copies destroyed, fearing legal action from some of the celebrities depicted in the book.

Of the books I have read over the years, only "Naked Lunch" bears resemblance to "Atrocity Exhibition". Personally, I find Burroughs's book to be rather more well written and with longer passages as well which stand on their own as "mini novels". Furthermore, from a sexually transgressive standpoint, "Naked Lunch" buries "Atrocity Exhibition".

"Atrocity Exhibition" is a song by English rock band Joy Division. It is the opening track on their second and final album Closer. The song was produced by Martin Hannett and Joy Division. It was recorded at Pink Floyd's Britannia Row Studios in London. The song title was inspired by the 1970 J. G. Ballard collection of "condensed novels" of the same name. Ned Raggett of AllMusic described it as "one of the least likely opening songs from any album—even if the core chorus from Ian Curtis ...

The Atrocity Exhibition: Exhibit A hasn't forsaken the almighty melody in an effort to make the scene, so there are still some catchy scorchers like "Funeral Hymn" and "Riot Act", both of which are standouts due to their focused delivery and killer instinct. Others like the overlong quasi-title track "The Atrocity Exhibition" almost seem to make a concerted effort at sounding as dissonant and mechanical as possible, ultimately going in one ear and out the other.
