The most common criticism is of The Secret's assertion that victims are always to blame for whatever happens to them. Whether it's a rape victim, a tsunami victim, or a heart attack victim, The Secret teaches that they brought it upon themselves with their own negative thoughts. This idea is, of course, profoundly offensive in many ways.

A complete secret is only known by the direct participant(s) of an event. If you stole an exam with a friend and cheated on a test, it would be a complete secret if only the two of you know about it. On the other hand, it would be a "secret" (not a complete one...) if you also told some best friend or person of trust.
