Face-Negotiation Theory is a theory conceived by Stella Ting-Toomey in 1985, to understand how people from different cultures manage rapport and disagreements. The theory posited "face", or self-image when communicating with others, as a universal phenomenon that pervades across cultures. In conflicts, one's face is threatened; and thus the person tends to save or restore his or her face. This set of communicative behaviors, according to the theory, is called "facework". Since people frame the s

Practicing mindfulness in intercultural communication is more art than science. Its goal is to balance between effectiveness (achieving mutually shared goals) and appropriateness (perceived as proper and expected). In the end, Ting-Toomey proposed a mindful inquiry practice and argued that it is a way to cultivate intercultural competence.
